PRAYER OF THE MONTH

Extracts from It's Autumn Again by David Clowes found in his book 500 More Prayers for All Occasions

Autumn is a unique time of year.

It's neither hurried and hot like summer should be,

Nor is it like winter, with it's chills and it's cold.

It's certainly not spring, for there's little new to be seen.

No, autumn is different—sort of stuck in between.....

.....The harvest is gathered, and all seems completed – but there are seeds of the new crop that will be sown come next spring.

No autumn is different, and some like it best.

There are leaves on the ground that rustle and snap,

And when you walk through them they get stuck in your shoes.

Autumn seems gentle, like nature thinking aloud.....

....So Lord thank you for autumn, it's trees and bright tinted leaves.....

.....Thank you for time to reflect, and prepare. Amen.

UNDERSTANDING DEMENTIA

Further extract from Sally Mitchell's book

On smell.

Like so many things in life, our sense of smell is something that we take for granted. And yet it is always there, cataloguing special moments in our minds. Years later the very same perfumes will come to us at random, steaming open the envelopes in our minds and spilling the contents. Or at least that's what my own sense of smell means to me. It is watching roses grow in the garden of our home as a child, fascinated by what nature could push from the soil and the heavy scent that would unfurl with their petals. It helped that, fully grown, these beautiful blooms were just the same height as me, perfect for dropping my nose into and inhaling deep lungfuls of their perfume. My mum loved roses and our garden at home was filled with all kinds of varieties. My favourites were the ruby- red Ena Harkness and the sunshine-yellow petals of the Peace rose, the edges pink as if tinted by the sun.
